Larry here is the information you requested on former Federal Financial Official who left to work for Federal Financial Management Contractors.

1. Erv Faunce who was the Deputy Commissioner of the Treasury Financial Management Service left there in the mid 80's to work for CDSI. CDSI is the contractor that developed the Federal Accounting and Reporting System used by several Federal Agencies in the mid 80's and early 90's. Erv has left CDSI and established his own firm (still trying to find out the name) that provides consulting services to Federal agencies on preparing financial statements.

2. Ron Young who was the Executive Director of FASAB resigned last year to work for Erv Faunce.

3. After Erv Faunce left CDSI, they hired Clyde McShan as the Vice President of CDSI. Clyde was the CFO of Commerce. Prior to his tenure at Commerce, he was the Director of the Dept. of Agriculture's National Finance Center in New Orleans. Now get this, CDSI is now running the National Finance Center under contract.

Is that enough dirt for you? One thing I've always admired about you Larry is that you focus your personal energy on the big picture and not on the petty politics (if it could be classified as such) going on around here.

You take care,

Sincerely
